In 1855, Nathaniel Hawthorne complained that American publishing was "wholly given over to a d--d mob of scribbling women," and that he could not hope to compete with women writers for popularity or sales: "I should have no chance of success while the public taste is occupied with their trash--and should be ashamed of myself if I did succeed. What is the mystery," he asked, "of these innumerable editions of the Lamplighter, and other books neither better nor worse?--worse they could not be, and better they need not be, when they sell by the 100,000."¹

In his next letter, however, Hawthorne revised his assessment:

In my last, I recollect, I bestowed some vituperation on female authors. I have since been reading "Ruth Hall," and I must say I enjoyed it a good deal. The woman writes as if the devil was in her; and that is the only condition under which a woman ever writes anything worth reading. Generally, women write like emasculated men, and are only to be distinguished from male authors by greater feebleness and folly; but when they throw off the restraints of decency, and come before the public stark naked, as it were--then their books are sure to possess character and value. Can you tell me anything about this Fanny Fern? If you meet her, I wish you would let her know how much I admire her.²

These two letters suggest some of the questions we'll consider this semester, as we read a variety of texts by nineteenth-century American women. Our texts will include novels, short fiction, poetry, and journalism. Despite Hawthorne's sense of jealous competition with these authors, his texts were canonized as American classics, while most of the texts we'll be reading this term were largely ignored by the academy until late in the twentieth century. We'll investigate the texts and their reception, considering women's writing and women's reading through a variety of lenses, including domesticity and women's sphere, political action and suffrage, the economics of writing and publishing, sentimentality and anger, and canon formation and literary merit.

EXPECTATIONS AND REQUIREMENTS:

This course is a seminar, and thus depends on everyone's participation. You are expected to attend class regularly, and to participate in class discussion. Participating in discussion involves both expressing your views and listening to your classmates' ideas. To facilitate discussion, you are expected to have completed all reading by the date for which it is assigned. Note that some of the assignments are longer than others, and plan ahead. As we will be working closely with course texts, please bring assigned readings to class each day. If you read on reserve, please bring your reading notes.

Most materials for this course are found on the course blog. To join the blog, go to http://edblogs.columbia.edu/englx3138-002-2013-3/ and log in using your uni. Then click on Site Admin at the right side of the screen, which will take you to the blog Dashboard. Click on your username in the upper right hand corner to access your profile. (You can also click on “Your Profile” at the lower left of the screen.) Fill in your first and last name, and then edit the setting “Display name publicly as” to show your first and last name. You may also add other information to your profile. You must join the blog and edit your profile by September 8.

Also, please fill out the student data form at http://bit.ly/17MR2Iy.

Throughout the semester, we’ll write as part of the learning process. Several kinds of writing assignments are required:

- Commonplace book: A commonplace book is a literary collection, a collection of passages and quotations copied into a book or notebook. This semester, you’ll keep a commonplace book, which will anchor our class discussion, help us to follow themes and questions across course texts, and help you to develop paper topics. For each class meeting, you’ll choose one passage (1-20 lines) from the assigned reading, and copy it into a word-processing file. You should include the passage itself, as well as a few sentences about why you selected it and what questions it raises for you. Your commonplace book will take two forms, one personal and one communal:

  - Your personal commonplace book lives on your computer, and includes the additions you make for each class session. As the semester progresses, you may want to reorganize the list of passages, grouping them by theme as you see connections emerge, or keeping the passages in chronological order. At the end of the semester, you’ll hand in a printed version of your commonplace book.

  - To create a class commonplace book, you’ll post each commonplace book entry on the blog, including both the passage and your comments about it. To post your passage to the blog, first compose your post in a word processor. Then go to the blog dashboard by following the link to “site admin.” At the left side of the screen, click on “Posts” and then on “Add New.” You can copy and paste your text into the editing screen. There’s a button specifically for pasting from Microsoft Word. Once you’ve adjusted the format to your satisfaction, assign your post to the category “Commonplace Book” and to the relevant categories for its author and title. Then click “Update” at the right side of the screen.

- Communal annotation of Little Women via Annotation Studio. (Details to follow)

- In-class writing: We will often write for a few minutes during class as a way to focus our thinking. Please keep your in-class writing with your class notes.

- Questions and reflections: The blog includes a page titled “Questions and Reflections.” In the comments section of this page, please post questions and reflections about course texts. You might raise questions about patterns you notice in the course texts, reflect on the implications of having a separate course on nineteenth-century American women writers, or suggest relevant contexts or questions from other courses you’ve taken. You’re required to post 3 comments to this thread over the course of the semester, but are welcome to post more frequently.

- Four 2-page papers: Short papers are due at 1:10 pm on the day that we’re discussing the material about which you’re writing. They should discuss a particular aspect of the assigned reading. You may do a close reading of a passage, explore a theme or issue in the text, or connect the assigned text with other texts you’ve studied, either within or outside of the course. While each paper need not be a fully-developed essay with a fully explicated thesis, it should be an essay rather than a stream-of-consciousness document. Its prose should be paragraphed, polished, and free of errors. Moreover, each essay should reveal that you’ve put some serious thought into the assigned reading, and should show close work with the language of the text. You may not submit more than one essay in a week without requesting special permission to do so. You must hand in your first short paper no later than October 7.
Aside from these constraints, you may choose when to write your essays. Each paper must be handed in to me on paper, and must also be posted to the course blog. (Follow the instructions above as for the commonplace book, but assign your paper to the category “Short Papers” and to the relevant categories for the authors and titles of texts you’re discussing.)

- NOTE: Essays must be typed, double-spaced, on white paper in standard fonts. Please don’t use very small or very large fonts to squeeze or stretch out your essay. The page guidelines apply to standard 12-point fonts. Papers should follow the new MLA guidelines for essays; see Rules for Writers, A Writer’s Reference, or The MLA Handbook for details.

- Comments and discussion: You are encouraged to respond to your classmates commonplace book postings, questions and reflections, and short papers using the blog’s comments feature. Comments are not required, but will be reflected in your class participation grade.

- One longer paper (8-10 pages) on a topic of your choosing: It may grow out of the short papers or emerge from your commonplace book. I strongly encourage you to consult with me as you write your papers. I’m happy to speak to you about ideas, about tentative outlines, and about rough drafts. This paper may be submitted at any point before December 6. At our final class meeting, you will briefly present your work to the class.

- Final reflection: a 1-to-2-page blog post addressing one or more questions raised on the “questions and reflections” page. Due December 9.

I will calculate your grade based on the following formula:

- Commonplace book: 20%
- Questions and reflections: 5%
- Short papers: 30%
- Longer paper: 30%
- Final reflection: 5%
- Class participation: 10%

The Barnard English department, like Barnard College as a whole, values intellectual integrity very highly.
Plagiarism (using the words or ideas of others without appropriate attribution) is a serious violation, and I report all cases of plagiarism to the Dean of Studies without exception. If you are at all confused about appropriate acknowledgment of sources, please see me for clarification.

TEXTS:

The following texts have been ordered at the Columbia University Bookstore:

- Child, Hobomok (Rutgers)
- Caroline Kirkland, A New Home, Who’ll Follow? (Rutgers)
- Margaret Fuller, Woman in the Nineteenth Century (Norton)
- Susan Warner, The Wide, Wide World (Feminist P)
- Harriet Beecher Stowe, Uncle Tom’s Cabin (Barnes & Noble Classics)
- Fanny Fern (Sara Payson Willis Parton), Ruth Hall (Penguin)
- Harriet Jacobs, Incidents in the Life of a Slave Girl (Harvard UP)
- Rebecca Harding Davis, Life in the Iron Mills (Bedford)
- Elizabeth Drew Stoddard, The Morgesons (Penguin)
- Louisa May Alcott, Behind a Mask; Or, A Woman’s Power (in Alternative Alcott)
- Alcott, Little Women (Norton)
- Emily Dickinson, The Poems of Emily Dickinson, ed. R. W. Franklin (Harvard UP)
- Elizabeth Stuart Phelps (1844-1911), The Story of Avis (Rutgers)
- Sarah Winnemucca Hopkins, Life among the Piutes: Their Wrongs and Claims (U of Nevada P)
Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, Selected Stories of Mary E. Wilkins Freeman (Norton)

The following texts are available online, via the schedule of readings on the blog:
- Elizabeth Stuart Phelps (1815-1852), “The Angel Over the Right Shoulder” (handout and online)
- Catharine Sedgwick, “Cacoethes Scribendi” (online)
- Nellie Bly, Ten Days in a Mad House (online)

Course texts have also been placed on reserve at the Barnard library. Links to texts available online, as well as links to supplementary material, are available on the course blog. Texts marked with a W on the schedule of readings below are available online, but are password protected. When you click on these links, you will be asked to enter a username and password. Enter the username gordis and the password texts.

Please inform me immediately if you have difficulty obtaining any course texts.

SCHEDULE OF READINGS:
(Links to underlined titles and additional online resources are found on the blog “Schedule of Readings” page.)

W 9/4
INTRODUCTION:
- Elizabeth Stuart Phelps (1815-1852), “The Angel Over The Right Shoulder” (1852) (handout)
  Additional reading:

M 9/9
Required reading:
- Lydia Maria Child, Hobomok (1824)
  Additional reading:
  - Molly Vaux, “‘But Maria, Did You Really Write This?’ Preface as Cover Story in Lydia Maria Child’s Hobomok,” Legacy 17, no. 2 (October 31, 2000): 127.

W 9/11
Required reading:
- Catharine Sedgwick, “Cacoethes Scribendi” (1830) (online)
  Additional reading:

M 9/16
Required reading:
- Caroline Kirkland, A New Home, Who'll Follow? (1839)
  Additional reading:
  - Nancy F. Cott, "Domesticity," in The Bonds of Womanhood: Woman's Sphere in New England, 63-100 (reserve)
W 9/18  Required reading:
- Margaret Fuller, Woman in the Nineteenth Century (1845)
- Massachusetts Ministers on the Public Role of Women, Pastoral Letter (1837)
- Woman Suffrage documents
  - Declaration of Sentiments and Resolutions, Seneca Falls Convention, 1848
  - Browse this site and come prepared to introduce the class to a text that you find interesting: Votes for Women: Selections from the National American Woman Suffrage Association Collection, 1848-1921

Additional reading:
- History of Woman Suffrage, vol. 1

M 9/23  Required reading:

Additional reading:

W 9/25  Warner, continued

M 9/30  Required reading:
- Harriet Beecher Stowe, Uncle Tom’s Cabin (1852)
- Beecher, excerpt from A Treatise on Domestic Economy (1841)

Additional reading:
- Catharine Beecher, A Treatise on Domestic Economy (1841), 1-47 (online and reserve)
- Catharine E. Beecher, An essay on slavery and abolitionism, with reference to the duty of American females (1837)

W 10/2  Required reading:
- Stowe, continued

Additional reading:
- James Baldwin, "Everybody's Protest Novel"
- Robert S. Levine, "Uncle Tom's Cabin in Frederick Douglass' Paper: An Analysis of Reception," American Literature 64.1 (March 1992): 71-93
M 10/7 Required reading:
- Fanny Fern (Sara Payson Willis Parton), Ruth Hall (1855)

Additional reading:

W 10/9 Required reading:
- Harriet Jacobs, Incidents in the Life of a Slave Girl (1861) (another etext)
- Lydia Maria Child to Harriet Jacobs. August 13, 1860 (332-3)
- Harriet Jacobs to Amy Post. April 4, 1853 (320-1)

Additional reading:
- Ellen Driscoll, "Loophole of Retreat" (1991)
- Harriet Jacobs resources (see blog)

M 10/14 Jacobs, continued

W 10/16 Required reading:
- Rebecca Harding Davis, Life in the Iron Mills (1861)

Additional reading:
Required reading:
- Elizabeth Drew Stoddard, The Morgesons (1862)

Additional reading:
- Susan K. Harris, “Projection the ’I’/Conoclast: First-Person Narration in The Morgesons,” in 19th-Century American Women’s Novels: Interpretive Strategies, 152-170 (reserve)

Stoddard, continued

Required reading:
- Louisa May Alcott, Behind a Mask; Or, A Woman’s Power (1866)

Additional reading:
- Karen Halltunen, "Disguises, Masks, and Parlor Theatricals: The Decline of Sentimental Culture in the 1850s," in Confidence Men and Painted Women: A Study of Middle-class Culture in America, 1830-1870, 153-190 (reserve)

Alcott, Little Women (1868) (Group annotation online at AnnotationStudio–details to follow)

Additional reading:

ACADEMIC HOLIDAY--NO CLASS

Required reading:

Additional reading:
- The Emily Dickinson Papers at the Boston Public Library
W 11/6  Dickinson additional Reading, continued:
- Cristanne Miller, "Names and Verbs: Influences on the Poet's Language," in Emily Dickinson: A Poet's Grammar 131-159 (reserve) (Other sections of the book may also be of interest.)
- Dickinson Electronic Archives (Virginia)
- The Classroom Electric: Dickinson, Whitman, and American Culture
- Emily Dickinson Writing a Poem
- exhibit on the continuing evolution of Poem 585
- 1924 Poems
- Higginson, "Letter to a Young Contributor" (alternate site)
- About Dickinson's "Fascicles"
- Wikipedia's index to various editions by number and first line

M 11/11  Required reading:

Additional reading:
- Selections from Cristanne Miller, "A Grammar," in Emily Dickinson: A Poet's Grammar, 20-112 (Choose the sections that seem useful to you.) (reserve)
- Philip Gura, "How I Met and Dated Miss Emily Dickinson"

W 11/13  Required reading:
- Elizabeth Stuart Phelps (1844-1911), The Story of Avis (1877)

Additional reading:

M 11/18  Phelps, continued

W 11/20 Required reading:
- Sarah Winnemucca Hopkins, Life among the Piutes: Their Wrongs and Claims (1883)

Additional reading:
W 11/20 Additional reading, continued:

M 11/25 Required reading:
- Nellie Bly, Ten Days in a Mad House (1887)

Additional reading:

W 11/27 Required reading:
- Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Iola Leroy, or Shadows Uplifted (1892)

Additional reading:

M 12/2 Harper, continued.

W 12/4 Required reading:
- Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, "On the Walpole Road" (1884) "A Village Singer" (1889), "A Gala Dress" (1888), "A Poetess" (1890), "The Revolt of 'Mother'" (1890) in Selected Stories of Mary E. Wilkins Freeman (27-40, 126-161, 180-199, 293-313); "Old Woman Magoun" (1905) (online)

Additional reading:

M 12/9 Conclusion: Report, reflection, and celebration

STUDENT LEARNING OBJECTIVES:
- Students will learn to think critically, to read analytically, and to use textual evidence in support of oral and written arguments.
- They will read novels, poetry, autobiographies, and short stories by nineteenth-century American women writers.
- They will learn about the literature, history, religion, and culture of nineteenth-century America through early American texts.
- They will read critical texts about nineteenth-century American literature and about the American literary canon, and will be exposed to a range of theoretical perspectives.